For the 3 credit points you should participate the whole days and actively take part in the discussions on philosophy of science.

If you get ill and miss any of the occasions with philosophy of science you will have to write a short essay about the topic discussed.

For the philosophy of science you will also have to read the textbook (Okasha, Philosophy of Science), which is the basis for much of the discussion. This means that you have to start reading before the course. Registered participants will get a free copy of the book a couple of weeks before the course starts.
